ROBERTS COUNTY 4-H YOUTH

Making the Best Better!

18 USC 707

ROBERTS COUNTY 4-H ENROLLMENT

4-Hers in Roberts County are enrolled in one of five clubs or are on "at-large" status. A youngster must be eight years old by January 1 to exhibit at Achievement Days the following July.

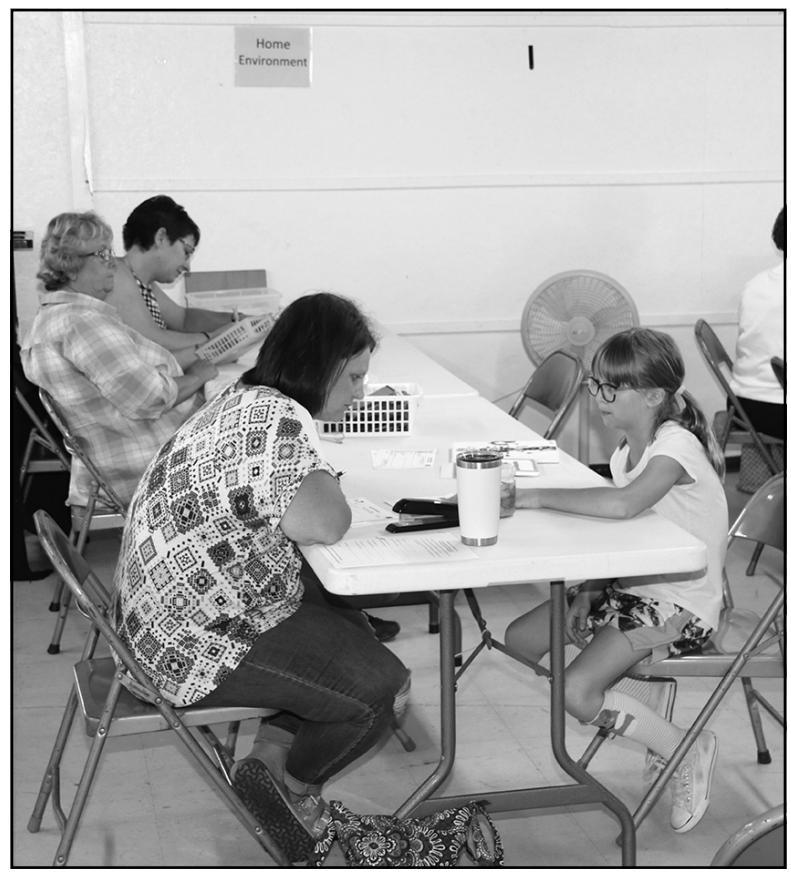

Youngsters under eight can participate in 4-H meetings and activities as "Cloverbuds." They can enter exhibits in Achievements Days and earn participation ribbons, but do not receive ribbon placing or go on to the State Fair competition. The annual 4-H year runs from Oct. 1 to the following Sept. 30.

4-H is the nation's largest youth development organization, involving young people in urban neighborhoods, suburban schoolyards and rural farming communities. 4-H fosters an innovative, "learn by doing" approach with proven results. Young people in the 4-H program are more likely to earn better grades and go to college, more likely to be a strong part of their families and communities, and less likely to engage in risky behaviors.

The Roberts County 4-H Program has numerous youth enrolled in the program. When youth are enrolled in a club they gain life skills during their club meetings, such as leadership skills, teamwork, public speaking, community service projects, and much more. At-Large youth members are part of the county's youth enrollment, too. These youth also gain life skills by setting their goals in specific 4-H project areas.

Roberts County has a very active shooting sports program consisting of archery and shotgun, as well as the annual Glacial Lakes 4-H Rodeo. The 4-H Program is open to all youth ages 5-18 as of Jan. 1.

For more information on how your youth and family can become involved in the 4-H program, contact the Roberts County Extension Office located in the basement of the courthouse in Sisseton. Contact: Tracey Lehrke, 4-H Youth Program Advisor - email: tracey.lehrke@sdstate.edu - or call 605-698-7627.

What is 4-H to me? It's many things to many people

By Mimi Larsen
Staff Writer

What is it about 4-H that keeps kids signing up, that keeps families interested and participating? The youngest children, the Clover Buds, are quick to say it is the friendships. The older ones appreciate the friendships as well, but will also say they learn a lot about leadership and volunteerism. Some of them find a lifelong passion. The parents talk about building independence and self-confidence.

Members of Roberts County 4-H community were busy at Achievement Days July 29-31. It was the first test of all their hard work throughout the year. They had to be ready, whether with their static projects, their fashion outfits, or their live animal presentations.

Elementary students Jayden and Brennan Lick, and Ty Laurence were working at the lunch stand. Rosholt's Harmony Hustlers were in charge of the stand this year, and on Tuesday, they were under the supervision of 4-H parents Missy Lick and Ranelle Sando.

Jayden entered photographs in the static projects competition, and was glad to have made applesauce muffins for judging. His brother Brennan made spice muffins.

"We made friends we wouldn't have otherwise," said Jayden. "We have friends from Wilmot, and this is the only time we get to see them."

Mya Loosemore, also an elementary student from Rosholt, showed up at the lunch stand soon after. She entered static projects.

"I've been taking pictures," she said, "And I like doing projects all by myself." She had a poster project showing how to paint rocks and leave them as gifts for whoever find them, to brighten their days.

This is Ty's first year in 4-H. "I made banana muffins," he said, before explaining he's excited about getting a heifer ready to show for next year.

Alan Schmidt, of rural Sisseton, is a 4-H parent, and he took the day off from farming to help wherever needed.

"Our kids started in 4-H about seven or eight years ago," he said. "It's a way for kids to discover how to do things they've never done before, to meet people they otherwise wouldn't have contact with – people in the county and the state. They're learning leadership skills, working with other kids and people, trying to figure out projects on their own."

Jill Pistorius, with the Roberts County 4-H office, says she likes to see kids come out of their shells.

"I like to watch the kids grow, and turn into real leaders."

Teresa Meland, from rural Sisseton, was a 4-H kid and is now a 4-H mom. Three of her four children are 4-H alumni, and she has one left who is competing.

"I loved the baking as a kid," she said. "I did a lot of arts and crafts too, and it taught me time management. I learned interpersonal relationship skills, the ability to speak to other people about my projects when I was getting judged. And I loved the summer camp at Lake Herman.

"I see more opportunities for kids now," she added. "They are taking their projects further, to state and beyond. Kids can make presentations with their poster projects at the Winter Farm Show. They can use them for school projects. They and their project become ambassadors for 4-H. It's expanded so much."

Isaac and Ranelle Sando, of rural Rosholt, were on-hand at Achievement Days. Ranelle was a 4-H kid in her hometown of Casselton, ND.

"I was involved nearly all my school age," she said. "I was very shy as a young kid, and I think the public speaking, the communicating you have to do with projects raised my overall self-confidence. Baking was my favorite [category], and I feel like I learned a lot of homemaking skills."

Her sons Dayton and Gideon were presenting their cats for showmanship judging in the Companion Pet category.

"The animals aren't the focus; it's the student who is being judged," said Ranelle. "After the judging, the judge and the assistant came over and showed him what they'd like him to do next year. I like the fact that they can improve from year to year."

Jason and Amanda Hannasch, from New Effington, were with their daughters Hannah and Avery, who were showing their rabbits.

Amanda was involved in 4-H in Wahpeton, ND from age 11 to 17. Jason helps with Roberts Co. 4-H archery.

"I showed horses," said Amanda. "It teaches you how to talk to people, and gets you out of your comfort zone. It teaches you how to be a better speaker."

"I like how 4-H gets the girls out to meet other kids," said Jason. "It gives them experience doing different things, like taking care of animals.

"This is my first year," said Hannah. "It's fun. I like the different events, like rodeo and Achievement Days."

Ashlyn Ebben, age 13, from Wilmot, has been a member of the Hillside Hustlers for the last six years. She wasn't showing just one rabbit, but ten.

"I've learned a lot," said Ashlyn. Speaking about rabbits, she said, "I've learned how the heat can affect their fur, and that they need to be kept cool." About 4-H in general, she said, "You learn a lot about leadership and helping others. You interact more with the community than you would otherwise. I've worked in softball concessions, and with farmers market meals. We've raised money for the building fund."

Tammy Ebben, Ashlyn's mom, has been involved with 4-H for about 15 years with her four children.

"4-H kids learn to be independent and how to take care of themselves. They learn a lot of community service; all the kids learn how to step up and help." Over the last two years, their club has raised $7,000 for the Roberts County 4-H Community Center, and they are raising an additional $2,500 for kitchen appliances. All of the county clubs are working hard at raising funds for the building they will call home.

Darla Loeschke, of Milbank, is a 4-H grandmother (of Tyler Heinje of Wilmot), after having been a 4-H mom for her three children, and after being a 4-H kid herself.

"The kids learn about honesty and hard work," she said. "They learn that you don't always win, but you can always improve."

When asked how many years she'd been involved in 4-H, she said, "Oh my goodness! For about 50 years, when you consider my years, my kids, and my grandchildren." Her favorite part of 4-H as a child was the Fashion Revue, "putting whole outfits together, and how to make them attractive."

Amy Currence, 4-H mom, 4-H leader, and new-building board member, wishes she'd been involved in 4-H as a kid, but relishes her current involvement.

"It's not just about learning – they gain so much knowledge – but there's so much about communicating," she said. Her children were involved in 4-H, and went on to the state, and in some cases, national level (with Hippology Quiz Bowl – the study of horses).

"They met so many kids from all over, at rodeo, horse shows, or the state fair. They go off to college and already know kids there they've met through 4-H."

Not only do the kids make new friends, but the parents as well.

"Almost all of our friends are 4-H families," said Amy. "You end up doing a lot of things together through the kids."

Tracey Lehrke, SDSU Extension 4-H Youth Program Advisor for Roberts County, is the one who helps all the clubs, all the parents, and all the 4-H kids to understand how to do what they need to do to help kids become the future leaders of this community, of whatever community becomes their home.

She believes 4-H is important, and believes in the 4-H Pledge:

I pledge my head to clearer thinking, My heart to greater loyalty, My hands to larger service, and my health to better living, for my club, my community, my country, and my world.

"It's those life skills, those everyday skills that are so important for kids to learn," she said. "When they're working at the lunch stand, they're learning customer service, how to count back change, how to say 'Thank you for coming,' until it gets ingrained in them.

"4-H helps in job skills, like a job interview," she added. "Every time a kid talks to a judge, it improves their interview skills. It improves their self-confidence and public speaking, which is very important for jobs. They show respect for the judges, and the judges show them respect. They learn to work hard on their projects, and they learn they may not be the top [contender], but they are treated with respect.

"Our motto is 'Making the best better.' I like that phrase, because you know the kids are coming back. Maybe they get a blue ribbon this year, but next year purple. There are so many project areas, the kids will find their passion, whether it's showing animals, or Fashion Revue, or something else.

"I love that 4-H is a family. We all help each other."

Congratulations to all area 4-Hers for all your hard work and commitment. We are proud of you and know you will do great this weekend at the State Fair!

Roberts County 4-H Public Presentations held May 30

The 2019 Roberts County 4-H Public Presentation Contest was held at the 4-H building in Sisseton on Thursday, May 30.

In this 4-H Youth-in-Action Event, 4-H members can choose any topic that relates to a 4-H project or program and speak about it using one of these formats: illustrated talk, demonstration, public speaking, or project why. The youth are judged on the composition of their talk, showmanship-mechanics of presenting, and their visuals.

The judges for the contest were Jennifer Ringkob and Kelly Brandlee.

These 4-H members now have the opportunity to register for the state contest at the State Fair in Huron.
